REMARKABLE POINTS ON THE MARKET

The market went against the stream dramatically. The situation was similar to that on Friday as red took control in most trading time. However, when VN-Index dropped to around 1,070-1,080 points, buyers started catching bottom. Pillar codes took turn to gain, including steel, securities, real estate, or banking. The gain was also supported by other groups so main indexes closed at day highest level, and the market balance was also positive again. The liquidity was better than yesterday but still quite low, showing that investors are still cautious. Foreign investors saw net selling in most trading time but suddenly bought at the end and saw the 3rd net buying session in a row.

TECHNICAL POINT OF VIEW

In technical term, VN-Index gained again. The volume was higher than previous session but was still below 10 and 20-session average, showing that the cash flow is not positive. Not just that, the index hasn't escaped MA5 and 20 pressure, and -DI widened the gap from +DI, showing that correcting pressure is still there. However, MA5, 20, and 50 are meeting around MA200, and the index gained and created base-withdraw candle with long shadow below from support level of 1,070-1,080 points, showing that Sideway status within a range of 1,070-1,130 points is still maintained. Therefore, the index might move to challenge upper line around 1,130 points. For HNX, HNX-Index saw similar situation. It also moved within a small range around MA lines from 5 to 200 that are meeting, along with a gain with base-withdraw candle, showing that the index is still moving within Sideway range of 220-230 points and might recover from lower to higher range. In general, the market is showing sign supporting Sideway within a range after the gain on November 28. Therefore, investors might keep a balance weight and surf on existed stocks. In which, having priority on good-fundamental codes with profit growth prospect that can attract strong cash flow.
